SCELF,

INSTITUT
FRANÇAIS

Ever since 2014, Shoot the Book! has been jointly organized by the SCELF, a collective rights management entity whose core business is audiovisual adaptation, and the Institut français, which operates under the Ministry for Europe and Foreign Affairs and the Ministry of Culture to promote French culture around the world. Since its inception, the goal of Shoot the Book! has been to create bridges between literary writing and audiovisual writing by pitching approximately ten works selected by an elite international jury.

The rise of cinema throughout the world and the growing need for audiovisual content inspired these two organizations to establish a large-scale adaptation market that brings together not only 80% of French publishers, but also a significant representation of publishers worldwide. The professional meetings also known as “Shoot the Book! Rendez-Vous” exist thanks to the daring Paul Otchakovsky Laurens, a great French publisher and film aficionado, who developed the idea within the framework of the Festival de Cannes. The first rendez-vous between publishers and producers from all over the world in Cannes are dedicated to his memory.
